GREEN TOPS ON FAIR TOWERS. Beginnings of the Color Scheme Ap-

Verdigris is the color now being applied to the roofs of the towers on the Machinery building. It is a vivid grassy green, that makes a high contrast to the ivory of the other parts of the towers.

If the plans of the architects are followed the great roof expanse of the Machinery building will be done in tile red. The ball surmounting the pinnacles of the Machinery towers will be a bronze brown, while the moulding between the green tower roof and the brown ball is left white.

The high color gives an idea of the brightness of decoration that is being planned for the main buildings in the Exposition group. It is barely possible that a uniformity of roof coloring will not be followed, so that greater spectacular features may be insured. plied on Machinery Building.

PLANS FOR WABASH WORLD'S FAIR STATION

Architect Link Designs Depot to Be Located on DeBaliviere Avenue.

TERMINALS ON CATLIN TRACT.

Only $1,590,000 Must Be Expended | Main Track Will Not Be Changed, and Depot Is to Be Opposite Entrance to the Pike.

> Theodore C. Link, architect for the Wabash Rallway, is engaged on the designs for a splendid World's Fair passenger station at De Ballviere avenue and Lindell boule-vard, directly opposite the Pike and the main Exposition entrance.

President Ramsey of the Wabash is now arranging the details of the plans for a complete World's Fair passenger service between the city and the Exposition, including terminals at the point already designated. No changes will be made in the Wabash No changes will be made in the Wabash line as it lies to-day. Union boulevard will be crossed at grade. There will not be any depression of tracks and the claborate plan for coming through Forest Park parallel with Lindell boulevard has been abandoned. At a point about 900 feet east of D Bealiviere avenue the World's Fair terminals will leave the main track and begin to swing into the castern section of the Catlin tract, which is held by the Wabash under lease.

swing into the eastern section of the Cathin tract, which is held by the Wabash under lease.

Gradually getting back to a due westerly direction, the terminal tracks will end in the depot that will stand on the western edge of the eastern section of the tract, the boundary being De Balivier avenue.

It is President Ranneey's present intention to use only the single Wabash track running out of Union Station for the World's Fair traffle. One spur will leave the main track. Other spurs will be thrown off the first one until the terminals spread out like a fan, as they do in Union Station.

It is estimated that this arrangement will permit a very rapid service and enable the road to unload quickly. The return to the city would be over the inbound tracks used by the Wabash east of Union boulevard.

The proximity of the Wabash Exposition Station to the entrance to the Pike and main gateway to the World's Fair will be likely to induce a heavy traffic. The Pike is the width of De Baliviere avenue from the passenger station and the entrance to the grand court, not more than 300 feet distant.

A visit of the Foot Guards will be an interesting feature of the Exposition. The first company, at Hartford, was organized in 1771. It served throughout the Revolution and was especially distinguished at the Battle of Saratoga. It has been in continuous service since that time and still wears the uniform of the British Grenadier.
